MILE HIGH STAKES

Tom Brady and the Patriots will invade the Mile High City this Sunday, looking to advance to a second straight Super Bowl, as they take on rival Peyton Manning and the Broncos. 15-16

RISE IN JOBLESS CLAIMS

1 The number of Americans filing for unemployment benefits rose to a six-month high last week, suggesting some loss of momentum in the labor market amid a sharp economic slowdown and major stock market selloff. Another report showed factory activity in the mid-Atlantic region improved in January as shipments rebounded, but still contracted for a fifth straight month. That indicates national manufacturing activity remained in the doldrums. REUTERS

RAPE COP SENTENCED

2 A former Oklahoma City police officer convicted of raping four women and sexually assaulting several others while he was on duty faced the possibility of life in prison at a sentencing hearing Thursday. In December, an Oklahoma City jury found Daniel Holtzclaw, 29, guilty on 18 of 36 charges of sexual assault, including rape. He faces up to 263 years in prison. Prosecutors said he preyed on women who had trouble with the law and forced them into sex, hoping their word would not hold up against his in court. REUTERS

REAL-TIME SPORTS

3 Facebook is tackling the sports arena with a platform called Facebook Sports Stadium, which the social media site said will provide real-time updates on games, popular posts from fans, statistics and commentary from experts. The service appears to be an effort to encroach on Twitter's territory. REUTERS

ALVIN AILEY AMERICAN DANCE THEATER

7 Dance students at the Boston Arts Academy had the chance to take a master class with members of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater artists Thursday. The dance group will return to Boston for performances in March. Master class instructor Hope Boykin takes a group selfie with the class afterwards.

ANOTHER SCHOOL CLOSED

4 Milford High School was closed Thursday after receiving a bomb threat, WHDH reports. The threat comes on the heels of Tuesday's closures of other Boston-area schools. Bomb threats were made against Arlington High School, Groton Middle School and the Florence Roche School on Tuesday morning. Some of the schools were evacuated. MATT LEE

WHISKEY TO MANNING

5 Sons of Liberty Spirits Co., based in South Kingstown, Rhode Island, poked the scrutiny-proof bear that is the Manning family this week by sending a bottle of its malt whiskey to Peyton Manning's wife, Ashley. The Patriots play Manning and the Broncos in Denver this Sunday in the AFC Championship game. MATT BURKE

FIGHTER JET CRASHES

6 An F-16 fighter jet crashed in rough terrain in remote central Arizona on Thursday, Air Force officials said. The $25 million jet is assigned to the 56th Fighter Wing at Luke Air Force Base in Glendale, a suburb of Phoenix, officials said. The crash occurred about 100 miles northwest of the base. REUTERS

BOLARIS: 'BEAST IN THE EAST' TIMELINE

It's crunch time, as the clock is ticking and a full-fledged nor'easter will begin slowly twisting up and along the East Coast on Friday night. The big question is just how far north the heavy snow line will extend into the Northeast and will it make it into Southern New England. I have looked at every single computer model over and over again, certain trends, better performers, and some history and this is how this eventual "Beast in the East" will impact the Mid-Atlantic and Northeast.

First I will play the elimination game, and right now I believe Boston will dodge the heavy snow bullet, with the southern-facing shores of the Capes standing the best chance of receiving significant snow. Boston might only muster up an inch or two, perhaps 3 to 4 inches the way I see it now.

New York City and across Long Island will be on the Northern periphery of the heavy snow bands, missing a paralyzing blizzard, but still I would put it in the major category due to the very strong winds, snow amounts exceeding 6 inches for most, but not for everyone, as there will be a sharp cutoff from heavy snow to only some light snow with little accumulation just to the north of NYC.

The bulls-eye for this storm is setting up across D.C., Baltimore, and Philadelphia where snow amounts in some places will exceed 18 inches.

Here's the setup:

A strong arctic high is anchored over northern New England and will act as a cold funnel feed, keeping I-95 corridor sector all snow. Right now I'm not looking at any changeover to rain in D.C., Philly or NYC, although during the height of the storm there could be some sleet mixing in during Saturday afternoon and early evening.

The storm system, loaded with moisture from the Gulf of Mexico, will be moving out of the Tennessee Valley during the day on Friday, and then redevelop off the North Carolina coast late Friday night. Rapid intensification will take place Saturday morning just off the Virginia coast with a plume of intense snow banding taking place to the north and west of the rapidly deepening storm. This will place D.C. and Philadelphia in the excessive-snow banding. Rates of 1-2 inches per hour along with wind gusts to 35-40-plus mph will make for periods of whiteout conditions.

The storm will stall for a time just off the coast, and then I see a more easterly shift, then a northeasterly move. This will still need to be watched closely.

Major tidal flooding will impact many coastal areas, with southern New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia to be hit the hardest. Northern New Jersey should see mainly moderate coastal flooding. Two to three high-tide cycles will produce most of the flooding, with the back bays getting hammered as the strong easterly winds will not allow the bays to drain. To boot, we have a full moon to contend with, adding to a higher tide than normal.

Localized major tidal flooding will also be experienced across all of Long Island, New York harbor and on into the Capes of Southern New England. Wind gusts along the Jersey and Delaware shores could exceed 55 mph.

The brunt of the storm will take place for Philadelphia and NYC

Boston

- Saturday: Noon - 3 p.m.: Light snow
- Saturday night: Periods of light snow. Windy gusts 35+ mph.
- Sunday: Early flurries. Very windy. Total snow: 1-4 inches.
- The Capes stand the best chance of receiving 6+ inches. Tidal flooding should be minor.
- Right now it appears Boston will dodge the snow bullet, as the major nor'easter slides off the northern Mid-Atlantic coast and passes south of the heavy snow benchmark. Still a significant margin of error exists with placement of northern extent of heavy snow.

mainly during Saturday afternoon and night with D.C. seeing the teeth by early Saturday morning.

Boston, ready for a light snow, offers to bail out DC

Mayor Marty Walsh said he would offer snow-clearing equipment to D.C.

The City of Boston says that it is ready for whatever may come from this weekend's potential snowstorm.

And it had better not be much after Mayor Marty Walsh, on the heels of diminishing snowfall predictions for Boston, offered to send snow-clearing equipment to the District of Columbia.

Walsh, at the White House for a meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, told reporters he would offer two truck-mounted snow blowers to help out the nation's capital, which is facing a predicted 24-inch snowfall, The Boston Globe reported.

"If we don't get hit with the snow that's [going to] hit in Washington, we bought two truck-mounted snow blowers last year to remove the snow off the street. When I see [D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser] later on today, I'm going to offer it to her," Walsh said, according to the paper.

Walsh's office told the Globe that the snow blowers, which were bought in June, can each remove 2,750 tons of snow per hour, and fling it up to 150 feet away.

He said he had already called officials in Boston to notify them of the proposed aid to Washington.

"We will help," Walsh said, according to the Globe.

But Boston won't be unprepared if the worst of the storm reaches Boston.

Officials said the city has over 40,000 tons of salt, over 90 plows and sanders standing by, two large snow farms, a snow melter, and access to over 600 contracted plows, front-end loaders, Bobcats and backhoes.

Blue Hills' Tree Beer branching out

Jim O'Neil, the director of operations at Blue Hills Brewery, was dropping his son off at day care one day, sporting a Tree Beer T-shirt, when a father started talking about the Boston rock stalwarts. It turned out, the man was the lead singer's brother. This chance encounter on that June day resulted in the birth of a band-inspired beer.

"We wanted to honor them [Tree] and they loved the idea," O'Neil said. "It may have been fate that our paths crossed."

The band sat down with Blue Hills, and Tree Beer was born not long after. The bottles hit the shelves of liquor stores in the Greater Boston Area in October, and now they're aiming for the Boston bars.

"I wanted to get something our fans, who drink PBR and Budweiser," perfect way to ride out an 'epic' storm on a Friday night," O'Neil said. "We would never have had the chances to expand the sales in Boston without Dave and their fans."

Tree bloomed out of a garage in Westwood in 1988, maintained their DIY ethos throughout the decades, and their beer-brewing fans have returned the favor.

"We want to combine the fun of good beer and loud music, we need our fans to spread the word for success," Tree said. "The best part about being a musician in Boston is that if you're cool to your fans, they will support you for as long as you support and respect them. This is something we've always dreamed of. Beer? Bands? What could be better?"

The Midway will host a tasting at 8 p.m. Friday.

frontman Dave Tree said. "We wanted to make something that would appeal to the blue-collar types. Guys on a ladder, or swinging hammers, things like that."

So far, three places have Tree Beer on tap: Silvertone in Downtown Crossing, Whitey's in Southie, and Refuge Cafe in Allston. The Midway Cafe in Jamaica Plain will be joining the on-tap list on Friday.

Big jump in loaded gun seizures at US airport security checkpoints

U.S. security officials intercepted a record 2,653 firearms — 83 percent of them loaded — from carry-on bags at airport security checkpoints in 2015, a 20 percent increase from the previous year, a federal agency said on Thursday.

The 2,212 firearms seized in 2014 was itself a record, according to the Transportation Security Administration. The firearms seized last year were intercepted at 236 airports, 12 more than in 2014, TSA said.

"Through increased training in detection methods, our officers are becoming more adept at intercepting these prohibited items," TSA Administrator Peter V. Neffenger said in a statement.

Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport seized the most guns in 2015 with 153, followed by international airports in Atlanta with 144, Houston with 100, Denver with 90 and Phoenix with 73, it said.

TSA said it screened more than 708 million passengers last year, or about 1.9 million per day and 40.7 million more than in 2014.

Federal Air Marshals flew more than a billion miles and 98 percent of passengers waited in line less than 20 minutes at security checks, it said.

#OSCARSSOWHITE FLAP IS A FIRST-WORLD PROBLEM

THE ERNEST OPINION

ERNEST OWENS
@MrErnestOwens

By now, you probably know about the ongoing backlash surrounding the all-white acting nominations at this year's Academy Awards for a second year in a row.

#OscarsSoWhite, the infamous hashtag being used to spotlight the controversy, has gone viral again — further sparking conversations about diversity issues in Hollywood.

But why did it take another year of award snubs to bring us back to this topic in the first place?

Looking closely, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences is predominately white, male, and older — recent stats cite voters as 94 percent white, 76 percent male, with an average age of 63. So regardless of nomination outcome, the problem is larger than that.

Which is why I'm not personally a fan of what appears to be a very narrow-minded push to boycott the Oscars.

For one, industry award shows are political and petty. Often times, big studio heads and brands dominate campaigns to get certain actors and films consideration. Does the name Harvey Weinstein ring a bell? The well-known film producer and co-chairman of The Weinstein Company is notorious for pushing such films as "Shakespeare in Love," "The Artist" and "The King's Speech" into Oscar-winning glory.

Which suggests that perhaps the problem is beyond just getting nominated, but the nature of the business itself. There is a lack of black filmmakers, producers, directors that are even a part of the industry to play such politics. And for decades, black entertainers have had to rely on white corporate figureheads to invite them to the table.

For any black entertainer to simply be disgruntled with the Oscars now because of not being one of the few, the proud or the only to be nominated — is a first-world issue. To boycott the vested interests that continue to hold the strings isn't smart, either.

One solution that could work would be for the conversation and suggested activism to shift away from award shows in general. They aren't going away anytime soon, and just because you have a good year for diversity wins doesn't mean the deep-seated industry issues are resolved.

I would encourage black celebrities such as Will Smith, Spike Lee and host Chris Rock to use their global influence to push for industry changes year-round and not just during awards season. Because it seems as though there is a level of self-centeredness when using award show rejection as a catalyst for complaining about problems in the business elsewhere.

I argue that Smith's wife, actress Jada Pinkett Smith, wouldn't have made her recent viral video urging others to boycott the Oscars if her husband would have been nominated for his role in "Concussion."

But again, these are first-world problems. Meanwhile in Flint, Michigan, there are predominately poor black communities drinking contaminated lead-infused water.

Hopefully these very passionate celebrities can channel their energies about missing one less industry award to actually saving lives.

But perhaps I'm just reaching for the stars, literally.

"Hail, Caesar!" (Feb. 5)

If you're a fan of Karina Longworth's addictive podcast about Old Hollywood, "You Must Remember This," you're the target audience for the latest Coen brothers joint. Then again, so is anyone who loves when they go full-on funny. Another one of their movies about idiots, à la "Burn

After Reading," it follows a scarily effective Tinseltown "fixer" (Josh Brolin) based on — and actually named — Eddie Mannix, who has to track down a star (George Clooney) who's gone AWOL from a shoot in the 1950s. There's also ScarJo doing Busby Berkeley-style numbers.

George Clooney brings back his old '90s Caesar cut as a 1950s Hollywood star in "Hail, Caesar!" UNIVERSAL

THE FUN STARTS HERE

The best new dumb-fun films

If you're going to leave your warm apartment for the bleak outside world, it better be for something worthwhile. Good thing we're getting lots of big comic book movies and sequels. Oh, and there's also a Coen brothers film. MATT PRIGGE

"DEADPOOL" (FEB. 12)

So Marvel movies are intentionally funny now, huh? Briefly seen in the dreaded first "Wolverine" movie, Ryan Reynolds' costumed badass has been repurposed as a quip-slinger prone to even broader jokes than the ones in "Ant-Man." The movie's also rated R, a first for the brand, suggesting it might be closer to the dark, sick humor of the comics.

"Deadpool" TWENTIETH CENTURY FOX

"ZOO LANDER NO. 2" (FEB. 12)

Penelope Cruz joins Owen Wilson and Ben Stiller. PARAMOUNT PICTURES

Hey, the kids who started school when 2001's first dalliance with Ben Stiller and Owen Wilson's mindless fashion gods came out are now starting to pay back their undergrad loans! That is all. Except now we're thinking about the David Bowie cameo in the original, and thus about David Bowie, and oh man, how great was David Bowie?

"THE HUNTSMAN: WINTER'S WAR" (APR. 22)

Emily Blunt joins Charlize Theron in the second "Huntsman." UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Kristen Stewart was too busy winning the French equivalent of the Oscar and kicking ass in small movies like "Clouds of Sils Maria" to return for the "Snow White" sequel. Actually, it's a prequel about the sister of Charlize Theron's witch, played by Jessica Chastain, who is fitted with the power to turn things into ice. Just like "Frozen"! Kind of exactly like "Frozen"!

"BATMAN V SUPERMAN: DAWN OF JUSTICE" (MAR. 25)

The trailers are annoying, Ben Affleck is miscast, the DC Comics movies are supergloomy and Zack Snyder is a terrible director — but this tag-team effort also cost $200 million. And it's the first one in a Marvel Cinematic Universe-esque world-building attempt for the other major comics label. Seeing it is like voting: You have to do it, we guess.

Ben Affleck broods as Batman. Of course. WARNER BROS. PICTURES

"GODS OF EGYPT" (FEB. 26)

Hollywood doesn't make enough crazy doozies, so cherish whatever the hell this is, with Gerard Butler screaming while a "Game of Thrones" actor turns into reptiles. It better open with a floating head vomiting up exposition à la "Zardoz" and "Dune."

least two Vault Bricks is also getting free shipping and free handling. That's a real steal because all other state residents must pay over six hundred dollars for each State Vault Brick.

Just a few weeks ago, nobody knew that the only U.S. State Silver Bars locked away in the private vaults of the Lincoln Treasury would be allocated to the Federated Mint for a limited release to residents in 6 states. Every single one of the 50 U.S. State Silver Bars are date numbered in the order they ratified the Constitution and were admitted into the Union beginning in the late 1700s.

"As Executive Advisor to the Lincoln Treasury I get paid to deliver breaking news. So, for anyone who hasn't heard yet, highly collectable U.S. State Silver Bars are now being handed over at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to residents in 6 states who beat the offer deadline, which is why I pushed for this announcement to be widely advertised," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"These bars are solid .999 pure fine silver and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

There's one thing Withrow wants to make very clear. State residents only have two days to call the Toll Free Order Hotlines to get the U.S. State Silver Bars.

"These valuable U.S. State Silver Bars are impossible to get at banks, credit unions or the U.S. Mint. In fact, they're only being handed over at state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury to MA, NH, VT, RI, CT and NY residents who call the Toll Free Hotline before the deadline ends two days from today's publication date", said Timothy J. Shissler, Executive Director of Vault Operations at the private Lincoln Treasury.

To make it fair, special Toll Free Overflow Hotlines have been set up to ensure all residents have an equal chance to get them.

Rapid shipments to state residents are scheduled to begin with the first calls being accepted at precisely 8:30am today.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out, but the U.S. State Silver Bars are only being handed over at just the state resident minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury for the next two days or until they're all gone, whichever comes first. For now, residents can get the U.S. State Silver Bars at just the state minimum set by the Lincoln Treasury as long as they call before the order deadline ends," confirmed Shissler.

"With so many state residents trying to get these U.S. State Silver Bars, lines are busy so keep trying. All calls will be answered," Shissler said. ■

Whazzup! Zac Efron was actually super good in 2014's hit "Neighbors." UNIVERSAL

Is Zac Efron secretly good?

With "Dirty Grandpa" out this weekend, we look at the many (or few) sides of its chiseled star.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

The first "High School Musical" movie is now 10 years old. You can't say it's too early to tell if star Zac Efron is secretly a talented thespian. He has been in the game since the 1989 TV movie "Triple Play."

And yet it's still hard to figure out what to think of him. This much we do know: When he's making fun of his bro-ish stature, he's very good. When he popped up as a Pabst-crushing, devious frat lord in "Neighbors," it was a revelation. He quietly telegraphed a real panic: Maybe Efron's character — and Efron himself — can do nothing but take his shirt off.

He had good reason to worry: When he's tried out serious roles — in Richard Linklater's "Me and Orson Welles," and in Ramin Bahrani's "At Any Price" — he was bland and vacant. Lee Daniels used that well in his insane "The Paperboy," in which the pretty boy did little but bop about in his undies.

And yet this summer he surprised us again. Yes, everyone hated the DJ drama "We Are Your Friends," and it had one of the worst opening weekends of any wide release in history. But Efron actually found a touching soulfulness to his young, precocious and foolish aspiring music maker. It suggested he might evolve into a strong dramatic actor — or at least better than he was in the Nicholas Sparks out-ing "The Lucky One."

A look at young Zac

"17 Again" (2009)

In his early days, Efron was happy to take shallow parts typecasting himself as the pretty boy heartthrob with funny one-liners. It's a card he played well, and "17 Again" is fun to watch.

"Charlie St. Cloud" (2009)

This Nicholas Sparks adaptation was an unfortunate turning point for Efron. But it at least let Efron flaunt his other greatest asset: his abs.

"New Year's Eve" (2011)

"New Year's Eve" is best watched by high-school girls at a slumber party. But, hey, that's not a bad specialty to have.

EMILY LAURENCE

A definitive ranking of Zac Efron's best shirtless scenes

Zac Efron is more than just a pretty face. His body is desktop-background-worthy, too. Here, we roundup his absolute best shirtless scenes. Head to Metro.us for the full list plus gratuitous videos.

1. "Neighbors"

Efron is at his shirtless peak as the frat bro in "Neighbors," and the "Neighbors 2" trailer teases at more half-naked goodness. It's no wonder at the end of the movie his character finds his true calling: as an Abercrombie & Fitch employee.

2. "The Lucky One"

This Nicholas Sparks adaptation is almost too cheesy to watch. Efron plays a Marine who almost died in combat. He credits his survival to a photo of a pretty girl, deeming it his good luck charm. After he comes back from deployment, he decides to hunt her down. The movie has few redeeming qualities, but it does gift the world with Efron's hottest sex scene yet.

3. "That Awkward Moment"

Efron even looks sexy while planking a toilet. How many people can pull that off? Overall, this bro-mantic comedy is forgettable, but those shirtless scenes are not.

4. "The Paperboy"

This time, Efron is naked and wet — thanks, Hollywood! Normally tighty-whities on a grown man is unappealing, but Nicole Kidman doesn't mind, and neither do we.

Efron won an MTV Movie Award for his shirtless work. GETTY IMAGES

Just because they've been together for four-and-a-half decades doesn't mean marriage is any easier. Charlotte Rampling and Tom Courtenay play Kate and Geoff, who are hit with news soon before an anniversary party: Someone has found the body of one of Geoff's ex-girlfriends. He's suddenly thinking about the love that could not be, while Kate realizes she may have been no more than his backup choice. As in "Weekend," director Andrew Haigh gives his actors room to find the nuances between lines. They reward him with deeply felt performances that don't always need dialogue to signify all that's bubbling underneath their very English reticence. MATT PRIGGE

Geza Rohrig plays a member of the Sonderkommando, the unit of concentration camp inmates who aided in the disposal of fellow Jews, in "Son of Saul." SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

"Son of Saul"

Director: Laszlo Nemes
Stars: Geza Rohrig, Levente Molnar
Rating: R

• • • • •

The first thing you notice in "Son of Saul" is the technique. Then you notice the horror. It shouldn't be that way, not when the subject is the Holocaust and the setting is Auschwitz-Birkenau. "Saul" is Hungarian filmmaker Laszlo Nemes' first feature, and it's almost a fact that it's brilliantly made.

Whether it's brilliantly felt is another matter. Despite its obvious noble intentions, "Son of Saul" is narratively boilerplate, with a story cobbled together from other Holocaust tales we've seen time and time again. Our guide is Saul (Geza Rohrig), a haunted member of the Sonderkommando, the concentration camp units made up of inmates forced, under threat of death, to aid in the disposal of their brethren. His only distraction is a mission: He's found a dead boy who may be his son, and he seeks to give him a proper religious funeral. It's not too cynical to think Nemes calculated what would make a great film, then did just that. It's too clean, which is to say it's often too contrived, cramming every incident that could happen in a story like this: the shower execution, the mass fire, the attempted escape, the "Children of Men"-style long take through chaos. It's like a connect-the-dots austere art film. And yet it still devastates. After all, how could it not? MP

We're drinking: Lagunitas Hairy Eyeball

Hops for your hangover.

WILL GORDON
letters@metro.us

Everyone knows the best way to soothe a hangover is to drink the blood of joyless smuggos who say things like "the only way to cure a hangover is to avoid excessive drinking in the first place." That's not always practical, though, which is why we're lucky that a moderate amount of next-day alcohol is almost as effective — if only in the short term.

This is why we must defend the brunch movement despite its considerable flaws. It's true that the demand for credible hollandaise has so far exceeded the supply, and the "if you put a fried egg on top, any combination of leftovers is worth $16" trend is getting out of control — that's not "Tuscan-inspired breakfast hash," pal, that's yesterday's spaghetti wearing a 20-cent hat — but brunch is to be forever praised for legitimizing day-drinking.

Coffee stouts are the natural choice for beer drinkers who refuse to get sucked into the overwrought bloody mary lifestyle, but I also recommend The Hairy Eyeball, a 9.4-percent alcohol-by-volume American strong ale that Lagunitas describes as "roasty, toasty, malty and hangover-halting."

The Hairy Eyeball opens with medium-dark chocolate and coffee flavors, and turns sweeter with time as licorice, vanilla and cinnamon notes emerge. Lagunitas is famous for brewing beers with a dank, earthy hop profile, but this winter seasonal is primarily a malt showcase, with just a bit of bitter pine on the end. It's simultaneously approachable and assertive, and it pairs perfectly with waffles, water and ibuprofen.

Lagunitas Hairy Eyeball, $6 per 22-ounce bottle.

Caputo is serious about her hair. GETTY IMAGES

Theresa Caputo: 'I'm the first one to say what I do is crazy'

Theresa Caputo, star of TLC's "Long Island Medium," says she can't predict what will happen on her live tour — but she knows her hair will be good.

"I always tell everyone what you can expect is that I'll have my hair and my nails done, and I'll be in a beautiful dress and fabulous shoes," she says. "That's all I've got so far."

The 49-year-old self-proclaimed spirit medium will share her ability to speak to the beyond at the Citi Wang Theatre on Feb. 28. At each live show, which she calls "the experience," Caputo will communicate with various audience members' loved ones, relaying messages from the spirit world.

Caputo's team tells us three times not to ask her for personal readings during our interview — a thought that had maybe crossed our minds a dozen times or so since committing to said interview — and we sadly oblige. Caputo alludes that her skillset is more of an organic one that comes to her without notice or agenda, so it's likely the request for an on-demand, over-the-phone reading would be sort of rude. In fact, she says the spirits are the ones who guide her live show, pointing her to audience members to call on, explaining why each performance's expectations are a bit vague at the moment.

"In a venue, I'll start to sense and feel things," says Caputo. "Whether you're in the first row, last row or all the way up in the balcony, spirits will guide me through that theater and they will have me stop and speak to someone. It's just amazing. I'm amazed by it every time."

She keeps reiterating her own shock — saying things like, "It would have been impossible for me to know those things!" or "There's no way I could have known that!" — in response to specific details revealed through her live communications, potentially because Internet skeptics who accuse her of tactics such as eavesdropping on guests and interviewing attendees before shows. But Caputo's fully aware of the online haterade, and opts to not use the terms "believe" or "skeptical."

"I try to use the word 'understand,'" she explains.

"I'm the first one to say what I do is crazy," Caputo continues. "How can someone communicate with people that have died? But then it's the same thing where it's like, how would I know these things if the spirit didn't talk about [them]? It's the same exact thing. You know?"

But really, about those skeptics...

"I respect how people feel; it's someone's opinion," Caputo concludes. "But you can't change the fact that after someone comes — whether they come for a private reading or group reading or the experience — they feel different, and they're able to live their lives in a positive way. And that's what it's about." RACHEL RACZKA

BELICHICK SHOULD BE ABLE TO SOLVE PEYTON RATHER EASILY

Who wins in a chess match, Bill Belichick or Peyton Manning?

Keep in mind, I'm not actually talking about moving pawns and rooks to get to the king. I'm talking about football, and more specifically, Sunday's AFC Championship between the Patriots and Broncos. Much of the focus has been placed on the quarterbacks. As it should be. Because the story is just too good. Tom Brady vs. Peyton Manning, one last time. It's almost as if Vince McMahon has been pulling the strings all season long, just setting us up for this must-see main event.

And as popular and exciting a storyline as that it may be, it's not the most important battle that will determine the AFC representative in Super Bowl 50. That belongs to Belichick vs. Manning.

And I'm taking Belichick every single time.

I'm on the record saying the only way the Patriots lose this game is if they lose the turnover battle. And as the week rolls along, the more I believe the Patriots won't lose this game. Not just because of how their offense clicked against Kansas City with the return of Julian Edelman, but also because I trust that Belichick will be able to confuse Manning at the line of scrimmage, enough to the point where we see his patented "happy feet" in the pocket.

And you know what that leads to? Turnovers.

The Patriots' defense will force at least one interception from Manning on Sunday. And that one turnover may very well be enough to win, what I expect to be, a close game.

How will they do it? With "disguise," of course.

Yes, I did just make up a word. In fact, I made it up years ago. And I did so while trying to figure out how to beat Manning. It's a combination of two words and phrases: "Disguise" the blitz, and create "confusion" for the quarterback at the line of scrimmage.

Disguision.

You see, after last weekend's loss to the Broncos, Pittsburgh Steelers coach Mike Tomlin called Manning "the ultimate play caller."

"He got them in some good checks and did a nice job," continued Tomlin. He's right. Manning is the ultimate play caller at the line of scrimmage. Say what you want about his arm strength, or lack thereof, you can't deny the fact that Manning's got what it takes between the ears to turn nothing into something, as he reads a defense before the snap. That's really the only reason he's still playing. In Week 17 against the Chargers, Manning replaced Brock Osweiler in the second half and changed the game. Sure, he only completed five of his nine passes, but his ability to read the defense and check into a run play can certainly make a difference.

In order to beat Manning, you'll have to disguise the blitz and somehow confuse him before the snap. Belichick has the front-seven to be able to do just that.

If Dont'a Hightower and Jamie Collins are healthy enough to play, they may be the keys to that strategy. Perhaps you could even see them set-up someone like Patrick Chung to come busting in on a blitz out of nowhere, as Hightower and Collins show the initial pressure and then unexpectedly

Bill Belichick has haunted Peyton Manning for years. GETTY IMAGES

What use is the game film?

The Patriots played the Broncos earlier this year, and while obviously they'll take a hard look at that film, the Patriots defense knows it's going to be different this time around.

"I think when [Peyton Manning's] out there, no matter what's in the game plan or what's not, he's able to check to different things that he's seen throughout his time," Devin McCourty said. "When Brock [Osweiler] was in there it was more [about] running an offense, running [head coach Gary Kubiak's offense.]" drop into coverage.

Believe me, Belichick will have all of this and more up his sleeve on Sunday in Denver. He might not call it "disguision," but it will be just that. And it will result in Manning dancing around, forcing a bad throw, turning it over to the Patriots and eventually costing the Broncos the game.

So, here we go. Belichick vs. Manning, one last time. Who ya got?

Again, I'm taking Belichick every time.

What to watch for Sunday

The Denver defense has already slowed down Tom Brady once this season.

JAMES TOSCANO
@Jimmy_Toscano
sports@metro.us

The Patriots head to Denver for this Sunday's AFC Championship Game (3 p.m., CBS), which means, yes, Tom Brady and Peyton Manning will face off for the 17th time — and most likely the last time.

That's not because Brady has any plans to hang 'em up, but it's apparent to anybody who's watched Manning play this season that he's not even close to the player he once was.

This weekend's game won't be about Brady vs. Manning. For one, the debate as to which quarterback is better has been put to rest by now. Hint: He wears No. 12.

The truth is, this weekend is much bigger than any personal rivalry.

Brady isn't looking to beat Manning, and Manning isn't looking to beat Brady. They don't need each other to fuel the flame that still burns within. Rings are the motive. If Brady can shove it in the NFL's face along the way, that's great for him. If Manning can prove he's not a shell of himself along the way, that's great for him.

One of those two will get an ultimate chance at redemption after 60 minutes of football on Sunday.

It ain't about the QB in Denver

Is Manning the best option at quarterback for the Broncos on Sunday? That's debatable. Brock Osweiler was serviceable before Manning replaced him again. But let's make one thing clear: The Broncos are in the AFC Championship because of their defense. Denver led the league in total defense this year, allowing just

Old friend Aqib Talib will look to halt Tom Brady on Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

283.1 yards per game. They held opposing QBs to 199.6 yards per game. They also allowed only 18.5 points per game. But the Patriots scored 24 points against them earlier this season, and that was without Julian Edelman and Danny Amendola.

Talk is cheap

One thing you never hear coming out of New England is trash talk of any kind leading up to a game. Clearly, that isn't the case in Denver, where already members of the Broncos defense have taken pot shots at Brady and Rob Gronkowski. Mind games? Really? The Patriots are too experienced to get caught up in that stuff. And even though they're on the road and in a place where Brady is 2-6 over his career, they'll do their talking on the field.

STATE OF MAINE
YORK, ss
Docket No. RE-15-114

ROBERT E. BERNARD, Plaintiff
V.
WILLIAM J. DEMERS & MARGARET B. DEMERS, Defendants

ORDER FOR SERVICE BY ALTERNATE MEANS (M.R. Civ. P. 4(g))

This Court has reviewed the motion of the plaintiff for service by alternate means. The type of action is Adverse Possession. Property or credits of the defendants may be affected, which include real estate located at 171 Indian Lake Drive, Lebanon, ME described in deed at Book 1916, page 660 of York County Registry of Deeds. The name and address of the plaintiff (or attorney), if known: James S. Mundy, Whitney, Mundy & Mundy, PO Box 187, So. Berwick, ME 03908. The name and address of the defendant (or attorney) if known: (last known) 17 Easton Ave, Hyde Park, MA 02136.

The Moving Party has demonstrated:

1. Due diligence in attempting to obtain personal service of process prescribed by M.R. Civ. P. 4.
2. The address of the party to be served is unknown and cannot be ascertained by reasonable diligence.
3. The requested method of service is reasonably calculated to provide actual notice of the pendency of the action to the party to be serviced and is the most practical manner of effecting notice of the suit.

It is ORDERED that Service be made upon the other party by: Publishing a copy of this Order once a week for three (3) consecutive weeks in the Boston Metro, a newspaper of general circulation in the county or municipality most reasonably calculated to provide actual notice of the pendency of the action AND, if the defendant's address is known, mailing a copy of this Order as published to that address.

It is FURTHER ORDERED that the party being served appear and serve an answer to the complaint or post-judgment motion to the serving party at the address listed above. The answer must be filed with the court within twenty-one (21) days of service. If service is made by publication in a newspaper, the answer must be filed with the court within forty-one (41) days after the first publication in the newspaper. Failure to serve an answer will cause judgment by default to be entered, granting relief as sought in the motion or complaint.

Aries Don't let anyone sidetrack you with negativity and roadblocks. Go about your business and get whatever job you've been given done. Responsibility will be your saving grace.

Taurus Emotions will surface, making it easier for you to express your feelings. Say what's on your mind in order to feel better and make progress with the people you encounter.

Gemini Think about what you are doing and the results you are trying to achieve. Don't be fooled by someone offering unrealistic solutions. Bring about changes that won't put you in debt.

Cancer Accept what you cannot change, but look for alternatives to what you are stuck with. You can make a difference if you are willing to do what's necessary to achieve happiness.

Leo Sidestep without conflict anyone who gets in your way. Simply back off and go about your business. Choose not to argue. Personal success is the best revenge.

Virgo If you offer solutions, you will attract an audience. Take care of your health and well-being. Abandon bad influences or excess in any way, shape or form.

Libra Stay under the radar. You will stand a better chance of gaining acceptance if you present a flawless plan. Don't share until you are prepared to face questions, opposition and negativity.

Scorpio It would be good to reconnect with an old co-worker. Together, you can build something concrete, implementing old ideas with new trends.

Sagittarius Reflect upon your past and present, and adjust whatever needs to be changed in order to get back on track. Overindulgence will drag you down, but solutions will prop you up.

Capricorn No one is perfect. Have patience and listen to what others have to say before you respond. Let your intuition guide you to make the right decision and take the proper action.

Aquarius Travel and matters involving an authority figure or foreigners are favored. Stick to the rules and look at the fine print in order to avoid a mistake or loss. Make every move count.

Pisces Keep your plans reasonable. If you take on too much, you could overextend yourself. Use your head and focus on frugal methods to reach your goal. EUGENIA LAST
